

CF on Cyber: An Update on the Changes to the Florida Telemarketing Act

June 30, 2021

On June 29, Gov. Ron DeSantis signed into law a bill enacting substantial changes to the Florida Telemarketing Act, which are effective July 1, 2021. In this podcast, Carlton Fields shareholders Aaron Weiss and Charles Throckmorton discuss these changes and key new provisions in the act. If your company is considering any phone or text-based marketing in Florida, this podcast may be of particular interest.

Carlton Fields has a nationally recognized TCPA practice and has handled hundreds of TCPA cases in Florida, as well as cutting-edge appellate issues in TCPA cases in the Eleventh Circuit Court of Appeals. The firm's extensive experience encompasses TCPA cases stemming from calls to cellphones, text messages, and faxes. The TCPA team also advises clients on compliance with related federal and state statutes.

Key Parts of the Amended Florida Act

- The most significant change is that there is now an explicit private right of action under the Florida law. It is similar to the TCPA and allows aggrieved parties to recover actual damages or $500, whichever is greater, or treble damages if the violation is willful or knowing. The Florida statute did not previously include an explicit private right of action.
- The amendment also added provisions that restrict a person from making telephonic sales calls if such call “involves an automated system for the selection or dialing of telephone numbers or the playing of a recorded message when a connection is completed” without the prior express written consent of the called party. Most of the anticipated litigation will likely relate to this provision. In its recent decision in Facebook v. Duguid, the Supreme Court dealt with specific statutory language, which defined “automatic telephone dialing system” as “equipment which has the capacity ... to store or produce numbers to be called, using a random or sequential number generator, and to dial such numbers.” Unlike the TCPA, the amended Florida statute does not have a statutory definition that limits its reach to technology that has the capacity to randomly or sequentially generate a number to be called.
- A rebuttable presumption was also created stating that any sales call made to any area code in Florida is made to a Florida resident or a person in the state at the time of the call.

Presented By

Charles W. Throckmorton

Aaron S. Weiss

Related Practices

Cybersecurity and Privacy

Cyber Insurance Coverage Disputes

©2024 Carlton Fields, P.A. Carlton Fields practices law in California through Carlton Fields, LLP. Carlton Fields publications should not be construed as legal advice on any specific facts or circumstances. The contents are intended for general information and educational purposes only, and should not be relied on as if it were advice about a particular fact situation. The distribution of this publication is not intended to create, and receipt of it does not constitute, an attorney-client relationship with Carlton Fields. This publication may not be quoted or referred to in any other publication or proceeding without the prior written consent of the firm, to be given or withheld at our discretion. To request reprint permission for any of our publications, please use our Contact Us form via the link below. The views set forth herein are the personal views of the author and do not necessarily reflect those of the firm. This site may contain hypertext links to information created and maintained by other entities. Carlton Fields does not control or guarantee the accuracy or completeness of this outside information, nor is the inclusion of a link to be intended as an endorsement of those outside sites.