

One Team, Two Cities: The Tampa Bay Rays' Sister City Plan

October 01, 2021

Can one team play in two cities (or countries)?

The Tampa Bay Rays have proposed a "sister city" plan, allowing the MLB team to play one half of the season in the Tampa Bay area and the remainder in Montreal, split between two stadiums.

For the summer meeting of Carlton Fields' Community & Development series, we were joined by Brian Auld, president of the Tampa Bay Rays, to talk through the innovative idea of sister cities, as well as the benefits it could bring the Tampa Bay area in terms of real estate and economic development, cultural exchange, and much more.

Presented By

Jin Liu

Related Practices

Real Estate
Development

Related Industries

Real Estate

©2024 Carlton Fields, P.A. Carlton Fields practices law in California through Carlton Fields, LLP. Carlton Fields publications should not be construed as legal advice on any specific facts or circumstances. The contents are intended for general information and educational purposes only, and should not be relied on as if it were advice about a particular fact situation. The distribution of this publication is not intended to create, and receipt of it does not constitute, an attorney-client relationship with Carlton Fields. This publication may not be quoted or referred to in any other publication or proceeding without the prior written consent of the firm, to be given or withheld at our discretion. To request reprint permission for any of our publications, please use our Contact Us form via the link below. The views set forth herein are the personal views of the author and do not necessarily reflect those of the firm. This site may contain hypertext links to information created and maintained by other entities. Carlton Fields does not control or guarantee the accuracy or completeness of this outside information, nor is the inclusion of a link to be intended as an endorsement of those outside sites.