

Capitol e-Report - Florida Senate Poll Shows Crist Annihilating Field

February 12, 2009

By Aaron Blake Posted: 02/11/09 05:21 PM [ET] Florida Gov. Charlie Crist (R) looms hugely over his state's open Senate race, holding 2-to-1 leads over all Democrats interested in the race, according to a new Strategic Vision poll. The poll finds the popular governor, who will wait until after Florida's legislative session to make his plans known, leading Democratic Reps. Ron Klein and Kendrick Meek by 34 points each. He leads state Sen. Dan Gelber 58 percent to 27, and Tampa Mayor Pam Iorio 57 percent to 29. The independent poll, set to be released Thursday, was conducted by a GOP-leaning firm. Meek and Gelber are the only two candidates in the race on either side so far. Klein and Iorio are still weighing their options. The poll shows Klein would lead a primary between the four of them, but with only 12 percent of the vote and with 66 percent of primary voters undecided. None of the four has a sizable statewide profile. In a GOP primary with four other candidates, Crist is at 54 percent, while Rep. Connie Mack is at 16 percent. Mack, who could benefit from having the same name as his father, a two-term senator, leads a Crist-less primary, taking 21 percent. Rep. Vern Buchanan takes second, with 11 percent, while former state House Speakers Allan Bense and Marco Rubio are at 8 and 5 percent, respectively. Mack leads all four Democrats in head-to-head general election match-ups, while Buchanan, Bense and Rubio are all neck-and-neck with the Democrats. "Buchanan and Rubio have problems despite being in the news a lot recently," Strategic Vision CEO David Johnson said. "Buchanan could, with money, buy name ID, but would need to attack Mack. Bense could be a sleeper." Among the Democrats, Iorio and Klein run best in the general election. In almost every race without Crist, though, about half of those polled are undecided. Johnson said Iorio looks strong for the general election but could have trouble in the primary. "Meek has a ceiling of support of about 25 percent, and it's hard to see him winning the primary," Johnson said. "Klein and Gelber have the most potential but could cross each other out." The seat became vacant when Sen. Mel Martinez (R-Fla.) announced he wouldn't seek a second term in 2010. To view the Capitol e-Report, please click on the PDF icon above.

©2024 Carlton Fields, P.A. Carlton Fields practices law in California through Carlton Fields, LLP. Carlton Fields publications should not be construed as legal advice on any specific facts or circumstances. The contents are intended for general information and educational purposes only, and should not be relied on as if it were advice about a particular fact situation. The distribution of this publication is not intended to create, and receipt of it does not constitute, an attorney-client relationship with Carlton Fields. This publication may not be quoted or referred to in any other publication or proceeding without the prior written consent of the firm, to be given or withheld at our discretion. To request reprint permission for any of our publications, please use our Contact Us form via the link below. The views set forth herein are the personal views of the author and do not necessarily reflect those of the firm. This site may contain hypertext links to information created and maintained by other entities. Carlton Fields does not control or guarantee the accuracy or completeness of this outside information, nor is the inclusion of a link to be intended as an endorsement of those outside sites.