

Repealing Waters Rule Would Take a While, Maintain Uncertainty

February 28, 2017

Carlton Fields Miami Shareholder Neal McAilely was quoted in the Bloomberg BNA article “Repealing Waters Rule Would Take a While, Maintain Uncertainty.” The article discusses President Trump’s expected order to withdraw the Clean Water Rule. McAilely shared:

Realistically, it would be hard for the new administration to go through notice-and-comment rulemaking on replacing the WOTUS rule in less than 18 months, and the process easily could take much longer. The Trump administration might be able to streamline parts of this process, for instance by requiring less time for consultation with members of Congress.

READ the article. (Subscription required for full access).

Featuring

Neal McAilely

Related Practices

Environmental Regulation & Litigation

