

A Litigator's-Eye View of Cybersecurity

January 01, 2019

Carlton Fields cybersecurity Shareholder Michael Yaeger was interviewed in a CyberInSecurity News article titled, "A Litigator's-Eye View of Cybersecurity."

The article dives deep into the former federal prosecutor's insights into cybersecurity, and how his extensive experience aids companies and his clients in his new role in private practice.

Yaeger offers his outlook on the authoritative bodies that oversee cybersecurity cases and the coordination (or separation) of states' cybersecurity rules and regulations, as well as the cybersecurity challenges companies confront, such as working with the federal government during security incidents, communication between in-house lawyers and chief information security officers, company and employee asset storage, and international privacy laws.

Read the article.

Featuring

Michael L. Yaeger

Related Practices

Cybersecurity and Privacy

White Collar Crime & Government Investigations

Litigation and Trials

Financial Services Regulatory

Securities Litigation and Enforcement

Related Industries

Securities & Investment Companies