

New Commercial Receivership Act Offers Clarity That May Lead to More Diversity

August 26, 2020

Carlton Fields commercial litigators Naomi M. Berry and Yolanda P. Strader authored an article in the Daily Business Review about Florida's Uniform Commercial Real Estate Receivership Act (UCRERA), which went into effect on July 1, 2020. The law sets a clear standard for the appointment of a receiver, which may help increase the number of women and minority receivers in Florida, according to Berry and Strader's article. READ: Daily Business Review, "New Commercial Receivership Act Offers Clarity That May Lead to More Diversity" (subscription only)

Featuring

Naomi M. Berry

Related Practices

Real Estate

Banking, Commercial, and Consumer Finance

Litigation and Trials

Related Industries

Real Estate

Banking, Commercial, and Consumer Finance

