

Companies Eager to “Lock In” Trump-Era Water Rule Exemptions

September 10, 2020

Carlton Fields environmental attorney Neal McAiley was quoted in a Bloomberg Energy & Environment Report article about how U.S. water regulations may change if a new president is elected in November 2020. Ahead of the election, many companies are hoping to receive five-year jurisdictional determinations specifying how the Clean Water Act may apply to their properties, McAiley said. READ: Bloomberg Energy & Environment Report, “Companies Eager to ‘Lock In’ Trump-Era Water Rule Exemptions” (subscription only)

Featuring

Neal McAiley

Related Practices

Environmental Regulation & Litigation

