Los Angeles, Calif. – Carlton Fields today announced the expansion of its Los Angeles Century City office and its national Business Transactions Practice with the addition of two prominent and seasoned transactional lawyers, William Mark Levinson and Brad S. Markoff.

Levinson, who serves as Carlton Fields' West Coast Chair of Business Transactions and Finance, maintains a broad transactional practice that includes representing a variety of industries including consumer, tech, food service, sports, real estate, cannabis, and municipal finance.

Markoff handles a wide range of real estate and domestic and cross-border corporate transactions in the securities, financial services, and technology sectors, with particularly deep experience in Asia-based finance.

The shareholders practiced together before moving to Carlton Fields. They will continue to serve existing client relationships in the United States, Asia, Europe, Latin America, and Mexico.

The attorneys grow the footprint of Carlton Fields' nationally known Business Transactions Practice, which boasts approximately 80 lawyers in 10 offices.
