Overview

Gina Alsdorf has more than 15 years of experience in the financial services industry, working with regulators, plan fiduciaries, investment professionals, and business owners on complex issues involving ERISA, employee benefit plans, banking, securities, annuities, privacy, and related tax matters.

As a former in-house counsel, Gina has a deep understanding of the inner workings of financial institutions and investment platforms. For more than a decade, she has held various senior roles counseling executives in the financial services industry. In addition, Gina has past experience serving as in-house counsel for a third-party administrator and as a former investigator for the Employee Benefits Security Administration. She draws on her first-hand experience, having sat on all sides of transactions and having worked with the many facets of the retirement plan industry, to deliver strategic technical guidance, creative problem-solving, and practical business advice in a rapidly changing regulatory environment.

In addition to her work in benefits, Gina is passionate about new and emerging technologies such as blockchain and their application to the financial services industry. Recognized as a thought leader and speaker in the field of ERISA and employee benefit plans, she remains at the forefront of industry advancements, continuously striving to drive innovation and solutions for her clients.

Admitted in Washington state. Pending admission to the DC Bar. All work in DC supervised by a DC licensed attorney.
