Overview

Jack Clabby's practices focus on corporate governance, fiduciary duty, and shareholder litigation, including the defense of securities fraud class actions, D&O litigation, and SEC enforcement matters. Recent engagements have included the defeat of class certification against claims that a brokerage violated fiduciary duties in its clients' account selection; the defense of a former bank chairman and president against allegations of breach of fiduciary duty arising from a series of private placements and the later sale of the bank; and litigation of restrictive covenants in employment agreements for clients in the securities, banking, and technology industries.

A former assistant U.S. attorney, Jack also represents companies and special litigation committees in connection with internal corporate investigations. As examples, Jack recently concluded (i) an investigation into alleged executive self-dealing arising from business with a related company and (ii) a series of investigations prompted by environmental, social, and governance (ESG) topics, including alleged executive sexual misconduct and a business unit's racial preferences and discrimination in customer-facing practices.

As a former cyber prosecutor, Jack advises corporate boards and management on legal issues regarding cybersecurity and represents companies in litigation, including class actions, concerning breaches and data loss incidents. Jack serves as a "breach coach," guiding clients through the loss or suspected loss of personally identifiable information, business interruption, and other system compromises.

Jack also provides governance, safety, and risk management advice to colleges and boarding schools, conducts internal and independent investigations of such institutions, assists universities with matters pertaining to Title IX, and represents education clients in litigation.

Jack began his career as an associate at the litigation firm Williams & Connolly LLP in Washington, D.C. He leads the firm's Securities Litigation and Enforcement Practice and is the firm's Hiring Chair. Jack is also a co-director of the firm's annual Carlton Fields Class Action Survey.

Experience

Securities and Derivative Litigation and Class Actions

- Defends companies, directors, and executives in securities fraud class actions and shareholder derivative lawsuits, with particular experience in challenges to corporate governance, internal controls, executive compensation, and accounting restatements.
- Defeated class certification in federal court against allegations that a brokerage firm violated fiduciary duties in connection with its clients' selection of managed, fee-based accounts.
- Represented insurance carrier in a two-week AAA arbitration in connection with claims against a representations and warranties insurance policy, arising from a private equity firm's acquisition of manufacturing entity.
- Advises public companies that have received shareholder demands, often resolving matters with solutions short of litigation.
- Monitors securities fraud and merger-objection litigation for major insurance companies and a retirement fund manager from inception through court resolution or settlement.
- Provides advice on fiduciary duties to companies with controlling shareholders and to companies that are planning for mergers, acquisitions, or equity investment.
- Defended the former CEO of a Fortune 100 company in securities litigation, derivative lawsuits, and a regulatory enforcement action, which ended, respectively, with summary judgment, dismissal, and a favorable settlement.
- Represented the special committee of a public company in a monthslong investigation into conflicts of interest between related companies, regulatory compliance with certain loan-servicing standards, and other allegations of executive malfeasance.

Internal Investigations and White Collar Defense

- Advises and conducts internal investigations for high schools and colleges, including on matters of student safety, Title IX, sexual abuse, and accounting and budget issues, and defends education institutions in associated litigation.
- Conducts internal investigations for companies, including public companies, into issues that have included corporate governance, accounting, compensation practices, fraud, and data theft. Jack has recently completed several event-driven investigations on environmental, social, and governance (ESG) matters, including into allegations of executive sexual misconduct at a bank and retailer, racism and bullying by managers at several companies, and social and racial preferences in a bank's provision of loans.

- In the health care industry, defends False Claims Act litigation and government investigations into alleged fraud and alleged physician self-referral, overbilling arrangements, and Medicare Advantage matters.
- Represents targets, witnesses, and subpoena recipients in SEC enforcement investigations, both for public companies and for individuals and firms in the securities industry. Recent representations have included a witness to certain revenue recognition practices at a public company, and a subpoena recipient in connection with the disposition of assets related to an SEC cryptocurrency investigation.
- As a federal prosecutor, Jack led numerous investigations into fraud, national security, and cyber matters.
- He served as the sole Computer Hacking and Intellectual Property (CHIP) prosecutor for southern New Jersey, advising other prosecutors on investigative techniques for computers, websites, and other electronic evidence.
- As a national security AUSA, Jack prosecuted violations of the U.S. export control laws and defense procurement fraud on matters involving high-technology military hardware.

Cybersecurity and Data Breach Response

- Coordinates breach response services and notifying victim consumers and employees, including for health care, insurance, technology, software, banking, and education clients. Since returning to private practice in 2014, Jack has served as a first-chair “breach coach” on dozens of data security matters across all major industries in the United States. Jack is approved panel counsel for several national insurance carriers.
- Defends companies and government entities in putative class action claims arising from data security events or allegations related to consumer or employee privacy. Recent clients have included a public school board and a document storage vendor.
- Participated in investigations of companies — both as a federal prosecutor and in private practice — concerning suspected insider threats to the integrity of IT environments, often working closely with computer forensic experts.
- Educates boards of directors and management about their duties with respect to data protection and communicating with law enforcement before, during, and after data loss events, including through “tabletop” breach simulation exercises. Clients for this counseling and education work have included public and private companies, banks, insurance companies, securities industry firms, schools and universities, and government entities.

Banking and Commercial Litigation

- Represents banks, financial institutions, pooled investment vehicles, and insurance companies in a variety of litigation matters, including customer and client disputes, responding to subpoenas, and garnishment matters. Jack has particular experience representing foreign banks, and U.S. subsidiaries of foreign banks, in U.S. litigation and in responding to subpoenas purporting to be served in the United States.
- Defends and prosecutes litigation involving restrictive covenants arising from employment, partnership, and LLC relationships, including covenants not to compete, nonsolicitation agreements as to employees and customers, and confidentiality agreements. Recent clients have included an insurance agency, an investment bank, and a litigation services provider.
- Defends banks, brokerage firms, and other financial institutions against claims for damages by customers and clients under FINRA standards, state common law standards, and state statutes related to the financial exploitation of senior investors.
- Represents insurance companies in connection with claims against mergers and acquisitions insurance policies (i.e., representations and warranties insurance), including litigation of such claims at arbitration.
- Defends and investigates allegations that assisted living facilities and hospice providers allowed employee theft and elder abuse, or otherwise violated residents' statutory rights.
- Representation of private companies, including hedge funds, private equity funds, and investment banks, in connection with disputes over ownership and governance, and the rights of limited partners.
- Defended consumer product and pharmaceutical companies in product-related tort claims and intellectual property litigation.
