Overview

Tre Dixon represents academic medical centers, not-for-profit hospitals, and public hospitals in a broad range of transactional, strategic, regulatory, and operational matters. As a former in-house counsel for high-performing health care organizations, Tre has a deep understanding of his clients' perspectives while helping identify the best structure to achieve their goals.

Transactional services include the full range of corporate acquisitions, integrations, and affiliations, including mergers, asset and equity transactions involving distressed entities, joint operating agreements, affiliation agreements, and physician practice acquisitions. Tre has experience structuring funds flow and support arrangements between component parts of large academic health systems. He also provides counsel regarding various hospital-physician affiliations to include administrative and professional services arrangements, co-management agreements, and physician employment agreements.

In addition to transactional counsel, Tre supports clients regarding corporate governance best practices, Stark and anti-kickback compliance, as well as day-to-day hospital operational matters involving patient consent, the Emergency Medical Treatment and Active Labor Act, and the Baker Act. He is certified in health care compliance by the Health Care Compliance Association, supporting his expertise in helping health care industry organizations understand and address legal obligations, and promote organizational integrity through the operation of effective compliance programs.

Prior to entering private practice, Tre was a senior vice president at Tampa General Hospital. In that role, he set strategy and oversaw corporate compliance, internal audit, legal, and risk management services. His transition from an in-house role to private practice was featured in a Business Observer profile.

Tre is chair of the firm's Health Care Practice and Health Care Industry Group.
