Overview

Erin Hoyle concentrates her practice on government investigations, corporate internal investigations, and white collar criminal defense, with a focus on the False Claims Act, whistleblower complaints, allegations of health care fraud, securities litigation, and OFAC licensing applications.

Her experience with the False Claims Act includes defending health care clients in civil qui tam actions alleging the submission of false claims for payment, federal anti-kickback and Stark Law violations, and employer retaliation claims. She also represents government contractors accused of fraud, waste, or abuse of government funds. Erin counsels companies on how to best avoid and detect potential False Claims Act violations, and how to most effectively respond when faced with such allegations.

Erin frequently defends companies, executives, and employees in government and criminal investigations and conducts internal investigations. Her experience in this area includes government contracting fraud, cybercrime, trade secret misappropriation, video voyeurism, theft of government property, health care technology, bribery of public officials, initial coin offerings, securities, public company accounting, and compliance with professional standards of conduct. These investigations have been prompted by government enforcement proceedings, as well as company-initiated investigations based on suspected wrongdoing by employees, competitors, and other third parties.

Erin further assists U.S. companies with OFAC licensing matters, including seeking approval for proposed transactions with a foreign company or government and applying for the release of funds transferred from a specially designated national (SDN).

Erin serves as a member of the Rankings and Endorsements Committee and the Young Professionals Committee of the Women's White Collar Defense Association, an organization promoting diversity for female attorneys who specialize in the defense of government enforcement actions and internal investigations. She is a frequent speaker and author on the False Claims Act, corporate compliance, and protecting the attorney-client privilege and work product doctrine.
