Overview

Robin Leavengood advises construction clients in resolving complex construction disputes through mediation, litigation, arbitration, and appellate proceedings. Her clients include nationwide homebuilders, general contractors, subcontractors, suppliers, sureties, public and private owners, design professionals, and condominium associations.

Robin has more than 15 years of experience litigating in both state and federal court. Her experience at the trial and appellate level includes matters involving construction lien and defect litigation, real property litigation, surety bond claims, product liability, insurance defense, contract disputes, noncompete agreements, intellectual property, financial regulatory compliance, and class actions.

Robin is also skilled at handling large volumes of individual matters for clients. Before joining Carlton Fields, she worked with national coordinating counsel and local Florida counsel for a national institutional pharmacy and an automobile service chain, managing portfolios of contract, product liability, personal injury, and collections litigation.
