Overview

Bob Shapiro handles corporate, securities, and insurance regulatory and transactional law matters.

Bob is an insurance attorney with comprehensive industry experience. He counsels on the regulatory requirements for property and casualty insurers as well as various types of life and annuity insurance products. He also counsels clients, including government-sponsored insurers, in using insurance-linked securities to spread the risk of loss from catastrophic hazards such as floods resulting from named storms. For example, Bob assisted the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) in securing reinsurance for the National Flood Insurance Program for the first time from the private market. He also served as counsel in FEMA's first-ever issuance of a catastrophe bond covering flood insurance risks. Bob has also counseled the state of Florida's insurer of last resort, Citizens Insurance Corp., in obtaining reinsurance from the private market as well as issuing six catastrophe bonds.

Bob's experience also includes assisting in the formation of some of the largest insurance companies in the world, and he has been involved in the operation and regulation of insurance companies and insurance producers, as well as in the rehabilitation and liquidation of insurers. He also regularly assists in helping with the design and approval process of various property and casualty products, including workers' compensation and various types of commercial insurance products. He has assisted in numerous merger and acquisition transactions involving insurance companies and insurance producer firms. He has represented investment banking firms in various insurance regulatory issues and acquisitions.

Bob has counseled on and assisted with the full range of reinsurance transactions for both life and annuity insurers as well as property and casualty insurers. He has drafted reinsurance contracts for proportional as well as non-proportional reinsurance and modified coinsurance reinsurance. He has also drafted reinsurance commutation agreements and loss portfolio agreements. In addition, Bob actively assists with catastrophe bond issuances, including the issuance of a $1.5 billion bond, the largest catastrophe bond ever issued. He regularly counsels clients on the regulation of reinsurance, reinsurance claims, and the administration of reinsurance agreements. Bob also assists in the drafting of reinsurance trust agreements to allow ceding insurers to obtain financial statement credit for risks ceded to unauthorized and nonaccredited reinsurers.

Bob also served on the board of directors of a Bermuda-domiciled publicly traded insurance and reinsurance holding company where he was chairman of the compensation and governance committees.

He has represented clients before all of the large states' insurance departments on many issues, including obtaining approval for the issuance of financial guaranty insurance products, life and annuity products, and insurer mergers and acquisitions, as well as threats against licenses. Bob has represented insurers before state insurance departments on disputes involving financial examinations and market conduct examinations. He has also represented insurers before Congress, the Treasury Department's Surety Bond Branch, the Federal Reserve Board, the Comptroller of the Currency, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., and state legislatures in such areas as qualifying for and maintaining a treasury listing, insurance product credit enhancement, insurer solvency regulation, the McCarran-Ferguson Act, financial services deregulation, taxation, rating classifications, insurer profitability, licensing, and new products.

In addition, Bob has worked on regulatory issues related to service contract reimbursement plans under New York Insurance Department regulations, and other states' insurance and insurance-related laws. He was counsel for the buyer in the sale and purchase of one of the largest service contract providers in the United States, dealing with numerous state regulatory agencies attempting to characterize the firm as an insurance company.

Bob practiced with The Bernstein Law Firm in Washington, D.C., and New York City for more than 22 years. Prior to entering private practice, he served from 1979 to 1982 with the American Insurance Association as senior counsel in the areas of investment regulation, taxation, and Treasury Department regulation of surety bonds. He was an attorney adviser with the Securities and Exchange Commission in the Corporation Finance and Investment Management Divisions, working in the insurance products and mutual funds area from 1975 to 1979.
