Overview

Jessica Bennett is responsible for developing and delivering a variety of publications and communications in support of the firm's brand positioning, business development, and recruitment objectives. Jessica, who graduated from the nationally ranked journalism program at the University of Florida and Stetson University College of Law, writes and edits the firm's website, industry and practice content, and articles published in legal industry and consumer publications. She plays a key role in shaping editorial strategy and processes and developing digital content marketing strategy. As the firm's senior writer and editorial manager, she combines her passion for writing and training in journalism with her knowledge and experience in legal research and writing.

While in law school, Jessica was an editor of the Stetson Law Review and editor in chief of the Journal of International Aging Law & Policy. Jessica joined Carlton Fields after two federal judicial clerkships in the Middle District of Florida.

Jessica is fluent in Spanish.
