Overview

Aaron Holman's practice focuses primarily on commercial and construction litigation. He represents general contractors, developers, and homebuilders in complex construction disputes, including construction contract disputes, impact and delay claims, and defect disputes. He has handled complex construction litigation cases involving multifamily homes, single-family homes, industrial complexes, and professional sports facilities.

Aaron also has experience in commercial litigation, including real property litigation and business litigation. He has experience representing financial institutions in escalated residential foreclosure actions, as well as representing businesses in contract disputes.

While in law school, Aaron appeared in multiple competitions as a member of the Florida Moot Court Team. He also served as the president of the John Marshall Bar Association, the oldest organization at the University of Florida Levin College of Law. Prior to law school, Aaron taught high school math in Marianna, Arkansas, through Teach for America.
